

Viewing activation information

To see information about the number of activations you have available for use, go to the Activation tab in the Administration page.

There are two different types of activations, depending on the LAC licensing you have.

Activations Type	Description
Subscription	Activations purchased as a monthly subscription.
One-time	Activations purchased on demand anytime within 1 year from the purchase date.

The Activations grid gives the following information for each activation type:

Column Name	Description	Applicable To
Reset value	The number of activations available upon the next reset date.	Subscription
Activations Remaining	The number of activations that remain in the current cycle, which ends on the date given under Next Reset Date. Be aware that rehosting or reactivating a license will count toward the number of activations made, so will decrease the Activations Remaining count accordingly. License activations are used in the following order: 1. Subscription activations 2. One-time activations	All
Utilization	The percentage of activation utilization. For example, if you have 100 Subscription activations and have used 80 of them, your utilization is 80%. This lets you see how quickly you are using your activations and whether you will have enough activations until the next reset/expiration date.	Subscription
Next Reset Date	The date that the next new monthly cycle begins, upon which the maximum number of activations allowed per month will be available.	Subscription
Start Date	The date the subscription was purchased.	Subscription
Expiration Date	The date the activations expire.	All
