Enterprise license management with License Statistics: use cases

License Statistics reports target the usage details you need to stay on top of, helping you lower your costs and increase the value of software purchases.

Having an authorized, easy to use tool that lets you see current and long-term usage can help you optimize your license usage in the long run. It's easy to understand that if you have 50 licenses and 10% are virtually unused, that 10% can have a significant impact on your budget. Sometimes the number of licenses may amount to not just 50 licenses, but even several thousand.

In addition to getting the bigger picture, it's also important to see the specific, detailed information that you and your management need to make budgeting and other other decisions.

This section consists of several subsections that describe example scenarios explaining how License Statistics can help you accurately measure license usage by user, meter usage on a group basis, monitor current license usage, as well as monitor denials.
