

LM-X End Users Guide

The LM-X End Users Guide is intended for corporate use by system administrators of LM-X protected applications, as well as engineers, software developers and others who are end users of LM-X-served applications.

In addition to this document, if you are planning to use a network license, you should have obtained an LM-X license server, an LM-X license file, and an LM-X license server configuration file (optional) from your application vendor.

This guide includes information to help you administrate your LM-X protected applications, including a description of LM-X license files, how to use LM-X end user tools, and how to install/uninstall an LM-X license server.

Software application vendors should refer to the LM-X Developers Manual for information about using LM-X to license their products.